Surgical management of a patient with renal angiomyolipoma containing synchronous duodenal adenoma and a history of successful treatment with sorafenib. Renal angiomyolipoma (AML) has been associated with the development of extrarenal lesions including hepatic AML, non-small cell lung cancer, bone AML, and renal cell carcinoma. In rare cases, multiple synchronous metastatic lesions of AML have been reported. We describe the first case of renal AML with synchronous hepatoduodenal and pancreatic AML to appear in a patient on sorafenib for treatment of hepatocellular carcinoma. The patient was successfully treated using a laparoscopic nephrectomy with concomitant perioperative management for the duodenal lesion. To our knowledge, there have been no previous reports of renal AML with synchronous hepatoduodenal lesions requiring surgical treatment. We review the literature regarding the characteristics of patients with AML and synchronous AML and present the first case of synchronous multiple AML in a patient with metastatic hepatocellular carcinoma.
