----- Calendar Docklet
1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue where the alarm would not treat the 25th of the month as the last day of the month. The add-in was sending the alarm prior to the last day of the month even if the date in question was greater than the last day. This was a bug that only affected some time zones and generated a lot of confusion for users who were in the right time zone yet saw the alarm first thing the following day. Calendar Docklet 1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue where the calendar would not appear to update if the selected calendar was reordered on the dock by the user. Calendar Docklet 1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue where the day that the calendar was launched would not always appear to be correct if the user has multiple calendars enabled. Calendar Docklet 1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue where the date of a recurring alarm could not be set when using the set method.

Calendar Docklet 1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue that would not allow the alarm time to be edited if the user chose one time zone and the time to be edited corresponded to a different time zone.

Calendar Docklet 1.4.8.0. Resolved an issue with the recurring calendar where the exact time of the first event would be two or three hours in the past if the user changed the time. Calendar Docklet

Are you ready to get RocketDock for Linux? You're in the right place as in this article we have explored all the requirements that you would need to install RocketDock on Ubuntu or Linux.

Installation You need to download the latest version of RocketDock from the website. If you're using Ubuntu, you can start by adding the RocketDock's PPA repository to your package manager. You can also use the repository provided by RocketDock.

Add the repository and update the packages $ sudo add-apt-repository ppa:rockdock/rockdock-lucid -y && sudo apt-get update

Now you can install RocketDock by running the following command:

Install rocketdock $ sudo apt-get install rocketdock

You can also use the alternative method provided by RocketDock for Linux installation. If you're using one of the distributions listed on the website, then you can install RocketDock by going to the official repository on the distribution website.

Linux – Ubuntu You can use this method if you are using Ubuntu. A PPA is added to Ubuntu to provide you with the latest and stable versions of RocketDock. The installation process will be almost the same as what we have explored in the previous step. One last step is to launch RocketDock. We'll move on to customize RocketDock in the next step.

Launch RocketDock

$rdconfig

Linux – Fedora If you're using Fedora, you can do a Yum update. This will enable you to install the latest version of RocketDock from the repos.

Update the packages $ sudo yum update The installation of RocketDock should finish after this. # Install RocketDock $ sudo yum install rocketdock Mac OSX If you're using Mac OSX, you can use the latest version of RocketDock from the PPA. This works when you have already installed latest version of Xcode. # Add the repository $ sudo add-apt-repository ppa:rockdock/rockdock-lucid -y && sudo apt-get update The installation will be very similar to what we have explored in the previous step. RocketDock is installed by default.
