Keygen for call of duty 3 playable multiplayer demo.Q: A computationally ill conditioned problem I have a matrix X representing a vector X . I am trying to find the closest vector Y to X in the least-squared sense. I originally solved the problem using the Singular Value Decomposition: $Y = U*S*V^T$ $X = V*S*U^T$ where U and V are orthogonal matrices (I'm using MATLAB) and S is a diagonal matrix. I then scale all the non-diagonal elements of S by $\sqrt{2}$, and then solve for Y . The above works. However, I have noticed that the solution is highly sensitive to the value of one element in the diagonal of S . I don't understand this phenomenon, and if anyone has any ideas as to why this is happening, it would be greatly appreciated. A: Using the SVD, the solution is not nearly as sensitive to a single diagonal element as it is to any element of the singular vector you use for the least squares fit. On the other hand, it is sensitive to the
