Layers can be manipulated individually or merged to produce a new composite image. You can cut, copy, paste, paste in transparency, erase, or even apply a filter. You can get out of Photoshop and into Photoshop by using the Bridge module. Adobe Photoshop Basic Considerations A layer is a master image that is used as a working medium for your designs and images. Layers are individual images that contain pixel information. A layer's opacity is key to its effects. The opacity controls whether or not an image is visible. Filters change the way the image appears, giving a different feel and look to it. Most filters effect a small area of the image. One such filter is the Watermark, which will insert a watermark into your image. There are different types of Layers. A solid Layer will retain its pixel information, while a transparent Layer allows you to see the image below it. You can manipulate a Layer, making it larger, smaller, or even higher resolution. You can add shapes and text to the Layers. All these things can be done with a Layer, but you must understand that all the previous changes are on top of the Layer, which means they will be erased. You may want to save time and make a constant adjustment. You should save your work frequently. If you accidentally delete a Layer, you will lose all the layers you created on it. Common Layer Menu Commands Layer > New Layer or use Command+N Layer > Duplicate Layer or use Command+J Layer > Paste or use Command+V Layer > Cut or use Command+X Layer > Move or use Command+M Layer > Flatten or use Command+Option+E Layer > Merge or use Command+Option+E Layer > Combine or use Command+Option+C Layer > Auto-Blend or use Command+Option+B Layer > Raise or use Command+Option+U Layer > Lower or use Command+Option+D Layer > Dodge or use Command+Option+I Layer > Burn or use Command+Option+R Layer > Clone or use Command+Option+C Layer > Shadow or use Command+Option+S Layer > Hue/Saturation or

Q: bash: date expression error I'm running GNU bash, version 4.3.30(1)-release (i686-pc-linux-gnu) on CentOS release 7.0. I have: declare -p array array=('{ "born" : "1756-03-11T01:00:00.000", "date" : "1756-03-11" }, { "born" : "1756-03-12T01:00:00.000", "date" : "1756-03-12" }, { "born" : "1756-03-13T01:00:00.000", "date" : "1756-03-13" }, { "born" : "1756-03-14T01:00:00.000", "date" : "1756-03-14" })' date=$(date -d '1756-03-11') echo "${date}" I get: $ date -d '1756-03-11T01:00:00.000' Can't exec "date": date program exited with non-zero status 1 What am I doing wrong? A: date just runs the date command. From the man page: Usage: date [-r|--utcl--verbose] [format] [time] You want date -d "1756-03-11T01:00:00.000" Q: Issue while submitting MULRSPDBS Im new to SQL, so am trying to find something easy to understand. I have a field where I store patients name and then I have stored the details of each patient in different tables. Now when I am trying to submit the Patient's details through one of my form, the system is running correctly but the first paramter of the stored procedure is always empty. So here is my stored procedure. ALTER PROCEDURE [dbo].[MULRSPDBS] -- Add the parameters for the stored procedure here @Pname varchar(255), @Dname varchar(255), @Tname varchar(255), @DDoc varchar(255) AS set NOCOUNT ON
