user Our site has a lot of users -- lots of high-usage users. We already have a large staff, and we're trying to find a way to allow a few of these users to access the site a little bit more than the rest of the site's users. Here are some rough numbers: About 30 new users a day About 500 active users Only 1 or 2 of these 30 users need full access to the site We'd like to give them access to the site for a set period of time -- say, 1 hour -- every week. They could potentially access more than the other users, but they need a lot of access. We'd like to know if we can do this safely. We're only talking about 1 hour, once a week, so there's no expectation that they'll use the site for a long period of time. We're fine with a system that allows us to revoke access in the future. We do have some other systems that add more access by way of an account, but I'm wondering if we could do this by group assignment, so people don't need to create accounts. We'll also need to make sure that if someone uses someone else's account, we can find out who it is and revoke that access. We've considered something like this, but it looks like it would require additional permissions: var now = new Date(); var maxTime = // how long to give access var timeRemaining = maxTime; while (timeRemaining) { var user = "user" + Math.floor(Math.random() * 100000); var permission = 'Access Download the map and process the differential parameters. This is the current KCDW weather report for the storm. Meteorologists use a few free parameters or "differential parameters" to determine what storms are capable of. They can help with identification, intensity, and thus, intensity of hazards. Differential parameters which are free for public use can come from various weather services including the National Weather Service, NWS, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, the European Centre for Medium-Range Weather Forecasts, ECMWF, and the UK Met Office, UKMO. Often, the model needs to be adjusted based on the local observing locations. This is called "adjacent mode". Free weather data and products are usually limited to the lowest pressure, the amount of wind speed and number of wind gusts, and the minimum temperature forecast or minimum/maximum temperature forecast. It does not typically include the cloud conditions. Free weather products and data can also be obtained online. Public parameters are typically available anywhere there is a free web service including WAFO, WXM, USADT, MEW, MUO, COSMO and their many regional websites. Data is accessible through various online storage platforms and is often linked to its origin. This is part of the infrastructure used to plan and support weather related operations. Use of these services require a proof of reliability through the Digital Marketplace. Once a service provider has a Digital Marketplace listing, they are approved by the Weather-store community. Data formats vary widely depending on their accessibility. Data from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, NASAs weather satellites is primarily collected and encoded for reading in different software programs. Another source is the Computer Model Archive and Distribution System, C-MADS. Models and data is available through the NOAA National Climatic Data Center, NCDC. Download formats include Cloudburst, SIMPLE RADAR, CISM, WRF, HYSPLIT (Previously known as GFSweather 1cb139a0ed
