Their side project Ilsa Olivia was formed after members of Antemasque band All That Remains asked Ilsa to sing harmony on a song. That lead to the three members of Ilsa Olivia writing a song. With a sound that's a classic mix of Ilsa's soaring vocals and Alex's underlying, bluesy phrasing, Ilsa Olivia takes a bit from each of them and combines them together to create something unique. However, the most important thing isn't what they sound like, but why the band exists. That's because the three bands members were friends growing up, and then became friends again in the touring music scene. "I think that what we really have in common is that we've been through the experience of being in a band together that worked, and we've all played in a lot of different bands with a lot of different bands and bands that just didn't work out. We made some very stupid choices as teenagers, which in retrospect was really unfortunate, and we've had to go through that, but we're still here and we're friends and we've worked together before. When your PC is slow or lags down with certain programs, you definitely know just what to do. You're quick to uninstall any program that gets in the way of your performance and PC speed, especially if the problem can be solved with just one or a couple of mouse clicks. However, there are a few problems that can be hard to remove due to their complexity or system-crushing impact. Windows shell extensions, browser plugins, and web browser helper objects come to mind, but did you know that you can also uninstall certain applications like browsers? Even though that's not an uninstalling tool per se, it still has some advantages, such as providing you with a good overview of which applications are running on your system. And although they are not a big deal, you can't simply decide to remove or disable all browser plugins and extensions. You may need more tools for that. Luckily, the Chrome Browser Cleanup Utility can help you solve a lot of issues. If you don't want to bother with the program, here's a simple solution to the problem and maybe even a few others you might run into. Just run the Windows Registry Editor and remove any extensions or plugins you don't use. If you find any entries belonging to your browser's extension or other browser helper objects, then you can remove them by simply clicking the "delete" button. After all, which one of those plugins or extensions is really taking up so much memory? If the system hangs or the page gets very slow, then you can check which plugins and extensions are causing the problem, delete them, and see if your computer speed improves.

Windows 1. Right-click the Start Menu button and select "Open with". 2. Click "Registry Editor". 3. Click "Edit". 4. Double-click in the top left of the window and wait until a list of options appears. 5. Click the plus sign on the right, to open the explorer tool window. 6. Double-click "HKEY_LOCAL_MACHINE". 7. Expand "Software". 8. Right-click "Software" and select "New" from the list. 9. Type "Software" in the name field and click "OK".
