L.A. Noire: The Complete Edition I can't get into detective games, so I really wanted a game that was a remake of a popular game, but that I could have the game experience I wanted, without forcing it. And I ended up finding that experience with L.A. Noire Praise 10/10 From the Good Game review: "L.A. Noire is a grand, excellent, spectacularly crafted police procedural, a game that's been done many times before but one that comes together in a new and special way." 9/10 From Nintendo World Report review: "The original L.A. Noire from the PlayStation 3 was one of the most critically-acclaimed games of 2009. It's a hard-boiled detective game with a world richly developed, an extraordinary story that gets under your skin, and a great cast of characters. It's basically the modern-day Law and Order TV show with the convenience of being a video game instead of a TV show." 9/10 From The Escapist: "L.A. Noire: The Complete Edition is a

Coldframe from Hydman's Garden December 21, 2014

Woodle Deluxe Coldframe by Hydman's Garden

Woodle Deluxe Coldframe Custom wood stile and beam coldframe.

Frame has 1 foot front lip and 2 1/2 foot rear slide-out. The Woodle Deluxe Coldframe is a great container to grow a nice planting for winter, if you're so inclined. I grew mine for a year and now I have shade growing limes, lemons, oranges, bell peppers, and basil. We have a large lemons/lime tree that can drip from the top. Coldframes are light-weight, metal, pole-supported raised beds that protect plants from frosts. They are basically wire frames attached to a metal pole. The Coldframe doesn't provide complete protection, but is a handy aid to those who plant in cold climates. In the coldest locations, large coldframes are appropriate. You can construct coldframes on the ground, in containers, or on raised beds. If you live in the wrong place for them, you can construct coldframes of wood or stone, but these won't provide the same protection as metal. My main motivation to build this coldframe was to add my own touch to a standard garden construction. Materials For this project, I used 2x6s. The 2x6 is a very sturdy wood - strong enough to support the weight of an adult and give a safe place to put your fingers and toes. I used 1x6" finish drywall screws. I also used 1/2" galvanized pvc threaded rod. (Pvc should be dried before screwing into it). The galvanized pvc was a little rough on the hands, but it's cheaper. Frame Construction The frame uses screws (screws should be flat), to connect the coldframe to the support poles and to each other. The design is such that the poles are parallel and on the same horizontal plane. The individual legs have sockets on the bottom, into which you can set the corner of a 2×4 block, for a flat, sturdy platform. I didn't add supporting railings on top of the Coldframe. Rather, the Coldframe has a 1' flat lip at the front and a 2' flat lip at the back. Plants are stacked inside, with just a few inches of straw beneath them

Q: Protecting a 5V TO-220 from noise? I'm working on a project where there will be some 5V devices connected to a 3.3V bus (for a bit of convenience). The 5V devices can easily handle 3.3V, but we'd like to protect them from generating noise. In this case, I have something like this to protect:

simulate this circuit – Schematic created using CircuitLab

The concern I have here is that this will only be an issue for short-duration spikes (so, as opposed to a battery that may get damaged even if only briefly). This seems very likely to me (though I'd like to be sure), but I just don't want to fry something after a couple of years like I did with my last project. Is this enough to protect my 5V device, or am I missing something? A: Noise sensitive applications The TO220 has ESD clamp diodes that provide extra protection. As you have suggested, the TO220 can handle spikes of up to about $2 \times 10^6 \text{ V/s}$. This is usually a fair amount of transient noise and it would definitely be safe. That said, noise sensitive applications (e.g. CCDs, Electron Discharge Sensors, etc.) may not be happy with such transient voltages. Good protection against the power-supply noise Another way to provide some protection from spikes on the 5V line is with an RC snubber that limits the peak voltage to the 5V supply to about $12 \times 10^6 \text{ V}$. The decoupling capacitor should be at least $50 \mu\text{F}$. This may be a bit more desirable than the TO220 because the clamp diodes in TO220 will conduct for much longer than the RC snubber. Typical 5V line spike The spike on the voltage line will represent $12 \times 10^6 \text{ V/s}$ at $3 \times 10^{-6} \text{ A}$. That's about 40
