The purpose of ASTM D4945 is to document a test method and procedures for. the inclusion of a 25N preload is recommended. the ground to the air, thereby dragging the aircraft with him. In contrast, the lock-out of spoilers on a ground vehicle is normally performed by blowing it backwards, thereby releasing the lock and allowing it to move in the normal fashion. In certain circumstances, the brake fluid can enter the fuel tank. That does not result in a fire, since the density of brake fluid is much less than that of gasoline. In the event of a spillage, a fuel-fired fire may result, or, if the spillage lands in a paper bag, it might set the bag on fire. Cost Some claim that the lock-out feature may be of minimal cost to the aircraft, while most other manufacturers say this is not true. In the context of aircraft, which are built to withstand the rigors of civil and military piloting, this factor is very important: lock-out is a very simple option to add, and it may be very important on a test flight when the crew wishes to land without risking the lives of its passengers. Lock-out, like any system, involves some expense. Some prefer to pay this money, believing it to be a worthwhile addition to the aircraft, and some will not. In addition, lock-out is a safety device and risks losing the airplane. The decision on lock-out can be one of the hardest parts of the job of an airline pilot. The author Kevin L. Lynch is a professional pilot and aviation writer.
