Dude Simulator is a first person, open world, sandbox, survival game. The game is a mix of a sandbox game and a survival game. The game is set on a new world where dinosaurs still exist and many other animals live together with humans. You, as the player, have survived the meteor crash that killed all humans (except you) on Earth many years ago. All that is left of humanity is a small group of scientists and one city. You, as a human, have no idea how to survive in this strange place. You have a gun, but you cannot even shoot yourself. A car picks you up from the city. What happens then? Use the Gamepad to play. Features: - Open world - No predefined storyline or objectives - Sandbox - Survival elements - Upscale your city Description: Over the past year, I've built a game of personal responsibility and hard work called Dude Simulator. I'm proud of the game, of the engine, and I hope you will find it interesting enough to download and play. Development: Dude Simulator is my first game using the Mist Engine v2.4 and it's quite a different experience from most other games. I chose the Mist Engine over other engines because it is just right for what I wanted. If you've ever played a mod game in Minecraft, then you already have a good idea about how I made this game. Development took around a year. First I created a great map of the landscape and all the assets using Paint. I used the scripting language Lua to make my own world. Next, I took what I created and translated it into code. The final step is the visualisation of everything, which I created using Havok. All the sound effects and music is my creation and it took me a few months to finish them. Story: I've built a game of personal responsibility and hard work. The map is a world with a sunset of colors in which the player finds themselves. It's a mysterious world where dinosaurs still exist and where there are other animals living together with the humans. The player starts off small but grows with the help of hard work. And sometimes we have to work through fear because of the vicious predator that hunts the player. Graphics: I've taken a page from Sandpipers' book and released my game in a few editions: Main Edition – No more than c9d1549cdd

Let's see what it is that I've come across so far. By now you are aware that I'm on a little quest to find out what the hell is going on. Who is behind all of this? Who controls this island? Who is the man calling himself Davids father? And most importantly, why am I here? My first encounter with what could only be the characters behind this is over a year ago. They were shouting and screaming, performing what could only be described as torture. I could tell from their voices that they were not human. I knew I had to help them, but the only way to do so was to enter the island.So there you have it, the prologue to this story. We will be starting our journey in the next chapter. I hope it is as

 (v. 17.8i)a Gamechanger for Total Franchise OwnersBuilt To Last Longer Than ManagersFrom IDM to the first all-in-one franchise management system, Franchise Hockey Manager 3 comprises everything a franchise owner could need for the game and provides the ability to work on it where you want. Fully supports Steam, Virtual Desktop, and Mac. This game is basically the next step from pro ice hockey management. Obviously, this is the genre we go to use when we try and make some Big Dollars. With issues of us not having such a god system thats given to us which couldll prove a major flaw in the game compared to pro ice hockey management (a game with a good system where its a good game even if you dont have the leg up on strategy compared to other games on steam). So if you just want ice hockey, pro ice hockey manages is the way to go... I truly hope it is emulated by the developers at some point and the needed assets are made available. I also welcome any additions that are made even though it is still missing some things... Fully supports Steam and Virtual Desktop (Windows and Mac) - we removed hardware support of the last version because it was a major pain. If you wish to use hardware in FHM3, you will need to buy extra controllers or headset (check the user interface). Creating leagues and managing players are both easy with the Virtual Desktop. Fully native add-ons. - You can now create your own custom leagues, stats, scorers and teams through scripting in order to play the game any way you wish. They run seamlessly in the game and are fast and accurate. Check out the list of supported language. You can also add football kits, scorers and keep your FHM2 save. Extensive online features. - Upload and download your games, management accounts, managing teams and players. In the past, some of the team websites went offline because the owner really worked on the game and went all-in on it and not wanting to spend all their time on the game. However, the websites are ready to use with significant development progress. Their reports are also reasonably accurate and based on statistics. The process is straightforward and at no point in time we are not affiliated with any player's team websites (sportclubs, hockeyaction). Full transfer market and trade deadline functionality. - In the default format, the transfer market function is in the shape of a regular trading

Heck, I don't even know what genre the game is anymore. It's a FPS, but it has space-shooter, bomb-defusing, and combat-freeking shit. It's a Hero's Quest, but it has skill trees and nonsensical stats and a wide open world where it's irrelevant whether you are good or evil. It's a Hack 'n' Slash, but it has melee. It's a Tower Defense, but it has a slideshow with fail states. All I know is that it's called Hecatomb because it's a bit like Hecatomb, the ancient battle game made by Simurgh. Features: There are chainsaws, so there are toothy monsters. A Wailing Wall of Red A Remuneration (Note: I'm not sure if it's a full feature or just a programming tool that I've used. It does allow the creation of autotools; I'm thinking it's a project that will one day be useful.) A Sense of Humour You Have A Dialogue Option (Note: not "get to know your fellow cultists" dialogue, but actual speech balloons) Reusable dialogue code. 2 types of dialogues: 1. You need to pick a dialogue to say. 2. You have to choose a dialogue and then a dialogue option. 3. You need to choose an option to choose a dialogue. 4. Dialogue options can be edited. 5. There are no hard-coded messages. 6. There is no dialogue autocomplete. 7. The end of the dialogue is determined by your choices. 8. The user can tell what choices you made. 9. Remembering dialogue options is a manual process. 10. (optional, you can disable it) Dialogue options can cause reaction animations. 11. You can cause a reaction animation yourself. 12. Animations are optional. 13. Dialogue options can trigger random events. 14. So can you. 15. You can choose your reaction choice when you're describing your action. 16. You can choose your reaction choice when a dialog option is triggered. 17. You can decide your reaction before triggering a dialog option. 18. Dialogue options are less common than other events. 19. You can react to random events on the fly. 20. Any event can be triggered in response to a dialogue option. 21. There are no scripting errors.
