Q: Do test scripts need to execute to SQL Server Agent I have been assigned to help out on a project currently being built. We are using SQL Server 2008. We have the SQL Server Agent scheduled to run a job every day (and sometimes hourly). My question is: do all user test scripts have to execute? Since the job executes the test scripts, do I actually need to write test scripts that execute? Do I need to have tests to display the results of a test script? A: No - it's just SQL Server Agent that executes them. You can execute your test scripts from T-SQL just like
