Windows and Mac. Starting with only a handful of weak robots, you must choose your battles carefully. Each robot you destroy can be reassembled and absorbed into your own army, growing your robot horde as you conquer your way across the map. But watch out, enemies get stronger, smarter, and more dangerous as you head towards your goal: a rocket that will take you far away from Earth. Escape Dead Earth uses radically simple two-button mouse controls to keep you focused on fast-paced action. VICE Magazine recommends Escape Dead Earth: "an RTS Where Deathballs Are the Only Tactic"! You get Blazer19: Master of Rage, a relatively unknown free-to-play game that has managed to stand out on X-Games Online's huge selection of free-to-play games. This game has a simple premise, but it also has many little quirks to satisfy the players' thirst for adrenaline. Gameplay: Blazer19: Master of Rage has a tile matching game that has more than 20 different types of blocks, each of which deals different amounts of damage to your characters, your enemies, and your whole screen. The game has four difficulty levels, and your goal is to reach the top ranked high score by collecting the stars on the board. As you progress through the four maps, you can enjoy different sets of blocks while gaining new abilities and powers. Graphics: The graphics aren't exactly the best around, but they do the job. At the same time, the game has a unique "Armageddon" effect that looks great when you're facing off against an army of opponents. Fun Factor: The game is definitely the funniest one on the list, with a lot of amusing comic relief and an atmosphere that makes the game all the more entertaining. AVAILABLE» By Trae WaddellBy Trae WaddellDecember 20, 2008 Let's get on with the countdown to submission of the Midnight Grub Session to The Armoury version 3.0. We've already shown you a few of the records submitted to create the magazine, and when we announced the midnight deadline, a ton of new submission options came up for grabs. So here we are. But first a confession: we haven't gone over all the records yet. In fact, we submitted the first batch without much thought, since we had an event going on when we were supposed to get some of this done - the Night Of BBQs part 1, which concludes at 4am. We missed some submissions because we weren't in the zone to write some instruction manuals, or to come up with the most creative stories and photos. With the conclusion of this event tomorrow, we are back on track, so we're taking the time to go over the records, and make sure we gave you all the good stuff. We also expect to do better than we did last time, but we still plan to do all the submissions the following day Here are all the submissions for The Armoury. There are two lists: the first is submissions made after midnight Friday, the second only the good stuff. good stuff submissionsThe Armoury submissions will be built into the magazine's version 3.0 - in the near future. We opened up this contest at midnight Friday to showcase some of the best stories around the internet for your spirits needs. This was a big, confusing challenge we put together, and you all stepped up to the plate and we're grateful to you for doing so. Thank you for participating. It's an honor for us to produce this free magazine - not to mention the last few years of our good comrades at Rick's, and to launch this with two friends who have been travelling and offering spirits to us over the years: Rick and Ryan. We really want to show you guys that being transparent and open is a very good thing - and you all gave it to us. Thanks. Well, there's the question - what does the 'all' mean? When we asked for you to submit a record, we had something of a loose definition: if it was an account of your last evening's spirits-driven experience, we'd take it. We came up with that

Q: CosmosDB AllKeys Method Returns Null I have a CosmosDB collection with no more than 5 documents. I've been working on a Cloud Functions project and I've just started to get familiar with CosmosDB. I'm programming in Python and I'm trying to retrieve all the keys of this CosmosDB collection. At the moment, I'm using the CosmosDB SDK but I've also tried to work with the official Microsoft API with no luck. `import azure.cosmos as cosmos` `database = cosmos.DocumentDBClient( endpoint_id=, masterKey=, firewall=)` `database.database.get_collection_properties().keys()` More specifically, this method keeps returning null and I have no idea why. I've done this under other circumstances and it worked just fine, with the difference that this time, it's not. I'm sure it's nothing to do with the documentation or anything of that sort, since it seems that this method actually has been there since 2014 and I'm not the only one who's struggling with it. But let me know, there's just one Poser! A: I found the answer myself through some tinkering with the SDK. The problem was that the keys() method was actually returning an array whereas I was asking for a dictionary. Easy fix.
