I want to have the same photo on my hard drive, whether I.Structural and functional organization of the thermosensitive TRPA1 channel. The thermal sensory transduction channel TRPA1 functions as a gate in response to temperatures more than 50 degrees C. Here we used cysteine scanning mutagenesis to identify one novel heat-induced reactive cysteine residue (C1459) within the extreme C terminus, which is strictly essential for thermal activation. Interestingly, similar cysteine substitution at another position (C1699), close to the channel pore region, also abolishes TRPA1 thermoactivation. Patch-clamp recordings showed that cysteine mutations at both the C terminus and the pore region dramatically decrease heat-induced channel activation with little effect on channel conductance. Biochemical analysis indicated that both the cysteine at C1459 and that at C1699 form sulfenate reactive cysteines that covalently link to a native cysteine located at the end of the second transmembrane domain of the channel. These results suggest that a large part of the C terminus, comprising the TRPA1 cysteine-rich region, forms the cysteine heat sensor for the channel activation.

Dorset Dorset The Dorset Club offers a wide range of activities from competitive teams and the popular Open to men and women competing in different disciplines and cups. The club is also the base from which we run our Summer School, running throughout the summer holidays and offering five runs of the 100km Great Western Ridgeway Run in the West Dorset Area. The Club will also be holding a Spring and Winter Meet in June 2012 to enable all members to participate in more than a few running events throughout the season. WE ARE DUTCH: PRIDE AND PATRIOTISM We are not a club because we like to run, and we are not a club because we like to cycle. We are a club because we are all Dutch.
