The inspiration for Rascals came from a chance meeting with one of our senior producers at VRLA's annual board game convention. Picking up a copy of the game, he was so impressed by the visceral board game experience that he quickly convinced the rest of the gang to buy into the idea. While it took us the better part of a year to get it into production, we know it has the potential to be the type of VR title that will quickly find a cult audience. *NOTE: The Rascals story can be played solo or online* Show More("%.2f",

Rascals Features Key:

Reflexive Gameplay - The game focuses on cooperation and improvisation. You have to react to the other players' actions. When the game starts, a live 3D model appears on the table: an exploding globe with a medusa head. It's your job to decorate it with explosives and anti-explosive meshes. As people blow up, you must place spikes on the muzzles of the medusa heads.

It may sound hard at first, but keep in mind you do not waste time with decorating or setting up. Think fast, improvise and you will see! After the onset, every player must update on the state of the game every moment.

- Live Nation - The game will help to promote Live Nation, their music events, and artists. Each player will have to perform actions in front of a music video and have to connect events related to the artist. You have to find connections between the YouTube videos and events in your city, and trigger events with cameras. Furthermore, you will have to improvise actions like: "change the pyrotechnic" or "defence of the arena" to attract more attention to your players.

Since the arrival of the FIFA franchise years ago, we've been asked to make a game for FIFA that plays differently than the standards they've set. When you think "football" and "card game" you don't usually think of that as a package. We took that as an opportunity to rethink the entire FIFA franchise, rather than just continue doing things in a way that's been successful for so long. It's been a lot of hard work and a lot of new discoveries. It's also been very rewarding and fun, and the gamers along the way have helped us make this a unique experience.

2015 It's my pleasure to announce the second beta for Rascals, a new VR board game that plays much like your favorite street fighter meets Rifftrax. I'm still working on finishing the game but I am starting to include the beta in to the Patreon. Rascals is a VR board game that mixes board game components and board game sensibilities with the first person mechanics of a fighting game. I like this idea so much that I have decided to expand it to a full length fighting game so I call it Rascals Fight (subtly different name!). You may not think that you are a fighter. Maybe you've never had a reason to get into a fight. Perhaps you grew up without any fighting culture and saw nothing wrong with a respectful disagreement. However, you know who does this type of thing, right? This is the type of person who never stopped growing, learning new things, being frustrated, learning from his mistakes and eventually fighting back. Maybe you remember watching your favorite b-movie as a kid and how good it felt to come out the other side victorious. If so, you have many friends who share the same experience. This is my attempt to capture that feeling. You start as a street tough in a developing city where the distinction between criminals and law abiding citizens is blurred. The only thing you know about yourself is that you are a bruiser who can take out anyone who gets in your way. The further you get in the city the more you learn about yourself. Most importantly, the more experience you gain, the better you become. The better you become the more people will accept you. This may sound very optimistic but the game is set in a developed future world that is becoming more urban and you can see the beginning of the end.

Yes, I am a grown up and have much better things to do then make Rascals in my spare time. I think the point is well taken though. Eventually we all learn that at some point in our lives we need to grow up and fight for what we want, not just what we have been given. And you too will learn this, through the best of fighting games.

Thursday, August 15, 2015 Got an itch for some VR board gaming? I have a new VR board game that is pretty much complete except for a few minor tweaks. I've been working on it since March and the game is almost done. I am trying to raise $75 a month for the next 4 months

Club Every fall, public schools across Melbourne prepare for a pedagogically-designed Maths course for students who've been identified as having trouble with the subject. The Maths for Rascals outreach course, which takes place this month, has a simple objective: "To have fun playing, problem-solving, and failing in Maths." A team of trained leaders called Rangers leads two teams of 25 students each, following a year-long "falling in love with Maths" program run at schools across the state with a similar goal. Nonuniform Co-ordinator, Lee Saunders, a former sixth year student of the University of

Melbourne, has been helping Math for Rascals since 2011. “We have an ingenious team, with great ideas and fantastic children, who work towards the task of giving each other endless amounts of fun, and lots of learning,” he said. The program is heavily based on the Canadian ‘Dr Who’ program. For example, students gain a sense of ownership over Math problems by coming up with ‘cute’ names for them. Each session focuses on a specific skill to overcome comprehension or conceptual difficulties in the students in much the same way the Dr Who character solves logic puzzles. Sessions may play out as role-playing games, and quite often the Rangers will dress up as various characters in order to ease themselves into the set situations. Sometimes the group struggle to grasp the concept, but through silliness and general excitement, a solution is found. In the end, Saunders says the goal of the program is to set the students’ minds to 0 degrees and erase any idea of Maths as a difficult subject. “By the end of the Maths for Rascals program, the students usually come away with a new sense of confidence in Maths, and so do their teachers. They say that it was the best school-based Maths program they had ever participated in,” he explained. Once the students have finished the program, a follow-up survey is conducted to see if they continue to enjoy the class, and if Maths has progressed as a result of the new-found confidence. Saunders added that the Math for Rascals program was first initiated in 2010, and has grown to be an integral part of the Maths department in schools across the city. C death receptor caspase-8 and eventually induces apoptosis. We report here that cell death induced by wild-type (cagPAI+) but not the isogenic cagPAI- mutant of H. pylori occurred in the presence of the cell-impermeable vacuolating cytotoxin (VacA). VacA was localized to the nucleus and cytoplasm of human epithelial cells. Transfection of cells with the dominant-negative, activated, form of Rac1, but not RhoA or Cdc42, abrogated VacA-induced cell death, membrane ruffling and macropinocytosis. These data suggest that Rac1 activation is required for VacA-induced cell death, membrane ruffling and macropinocytosis in human epithelial cells.

Democratic presidential contender Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-Mass.) said during Monday's Democratic debate that corporations that are "hoovering up as much power as they can" are draining the country's systems of social and political safeguards meant to keep government from running roughshod over the public. "Any time the five largest tech firms have more economic power than the market forces that were supposed to be protecting us, that is a fundamental threat to democracy," Warren said.

Social media companies, she said, are "hoovering up as much power as they can so we depend on them for our everyday lives, they control the playing field, and they haven't always been fair game." Warren and her top rivals—every one a capitalist in that sense—are landing in the Olympics of online debate, conducting the ritual banging of their cymbals and battering of their gongs in direct competition with the likes of Sen. Bernie Sanders of Vermont, former vice president Joe Biden and Sens. Kamala Harris of California and Cory Booker of New Jersey. The moment is unusual in that it reflects the ideological divide in the party
