In my Eclipse IDE I have created a new "project" ("create new project...") which contain all "source" files (I am using "Java project"). It is a very basic Java project with a main class and some classes. It is a multiselectable project. I will never run my Java project in Eclipse IDE, but I would like to give this project a standard (?) name: "Proj1" for example. When I go to the "Proj1" tab in the project, I don't find the "Proj1" name (or even "mycompanyname"); What did I forget to do? A: The project name is the element you want to give a name to. You then reference it from the project explorer, which you can find under the "Projects" tab. Eclipse will automatically rename the project when you rename the project name. Q: Object reference not set to an instance of an object. on Initializing the gridview My Code is shown below: public class Class1 { public static List GetLstName() { List Istdata = new List();
