New Ways to Control Passing The passing system in FIFA 22 will allow players to pass the ball to a teammate in five different ways. The old passing model will continue to be available for the first time in the series history. Sprint The sprint button will be replaced with Sprint/Stay. Sprinting starts the countdown timer, which will give your player momentum to increase their speed for a while before the Counter is activated. You can use Sprint/Stay to evade an opponent or to increase your speed. Pressing the sprint button will only last 10 seconds. Sprinting will still activate the new Counter mechanic: Pressing sprint while facing an opponent, the game will start pressing the Counter button and will not allow you to evade the opponent's tackle. Once your Counter expires, the sprint button will be disabled and you will be able to manually stop sprinting. Sprinting will take place at a speed your player is able to move at, which is determined by each player's agility attribute. Sprint will still be affected by Sprinting Stamina, with a stamina meter which slowly depletes as your player sprints. When the Stamina bar is full, you will be able to sprint up to three times in a row without receiving a free kick. Sprinting Stamina is affected by Kick Fitness, runs, sprint distances, sprint consistency and Sprint Times. Stay In FIFA 22, you will still have the ability to stay the ball, allowing your player to stop and stay in a short distance from the ball. Stay will also affect the Stamina of your player. Passing In FIFA 22, you can still use the old way to pass by pressing the pass button to open the menu and choosing a pass position. More than in previous games, you will be able to decide between Semi Ball Control and Short Passing. Semi Ball Control You can choose to pass the ball in all directions – Semi Ball Control – the ball travels between the touchlines and the dead line. The direct pass is the only one available in this mode. All of the semi ball control passes are performed by the player. Every semi ball control pass has a transfer speed. In order for the semi ball control pass to work correctly, your player must have a Line of Sight to the pass target. The player can still hold the pass button
