(3.35 MB)Exercise training protects rats against myocardial infarction-induced deficits in left ventricular diastolic function and survival. Exercise training prevents or reverses heart failure. Whether it mitigates cardiac remodeling and functional abnormalities secondary to myocardial infarction (MI) is not known. The present study tested the hypothesis that, beginning either 3 weeks or 6 weeks after coronary artery ligation, exercise training would attenuate cardiac remodeling and protect against abnormalities in left ventricular diastolic function in an experimental model of MI. Rats were submitted to sham-surgery, MI, sham-surgery with exercise training and MI with exercise training. The exercise training group performed for 1 h daily at 70% of their maximal aerobic capacity in a swimming pool for 3 or 6 weeks post-MI. Functional, morphological and biochemical analyses showed that MI increased left ventricular (LV) weight, LV fractional shortening and collagen content, the number of apoptotic cells, the number of macrophages, LV end-diastolic pressure (EDP) and lower survival rate at 24 h and at 1 week post-MI. Exercise training abolished or attenuated these changes. It is concluded that, in rats, chronic exercise training abolished or attenuated MI-induced remodeling and functional abnormalities and increased survival rates in spite of the fact that they are submitted to lower-than-normal (or physiological) exercise load.Aleš Škoda Aleš Škoda (1 February 1889 – 23 August 1962) was a Czechoslovak politician, leader of the Communist Party of Czechoslovakia in exile, and a member of the National Council of Czechoslovakia from 1946 to 1948.
