Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an antenna system mounted on a mobile communication terminal and used for a radio communication apparatus such as a mobile telephone. 2. Description of the Related Art Recently, antennas for performing radio communication by high frequency have been widely used. As an antenna using a planer circuit board of the microstrip line type, one having a dielectric substrate such as a printed board formed by a polyester resin or a glass epoxy resin and has a copper plate plated on one surface thereof and a conductive circuit layer such as a printed circuit layer on the other surface thereof has been known. In such an antenna, a feeding signal is sent to the conductive circuit layer on the back surface side of the dielectric substrate, and the feeding signal is reflected by the conductive circuit layer and thus a resonant circuit composed of the conductive circuit layer and the ground layer formed on the other surface of the dielectric substrate is configured. As an antenna mounting structure, a structure has been known in which the antenna is mounted on the dielectric substrate with a metal plate such as an iron plate being inserted between the back surface of the dielectric substrate and the ground layer and the electromagnetic shielding properties are obtained by bringing the antenna into contact with the metal plate (for example, see JP-A-1-130942 (Paragraphs 0051 to 0055)). However, in the structure described in JP-A-1-130942, as the position of mounting the antenna on the
