After the creative bug bit art director Rob Ryan and photographer Jay Corson-Friedrich on an August trip to the rural town of Barlow, Idaho, the pair decided to stay. "It had a very nice sense of place, it's a town with very narrow streets and big trees. It's very gritty," says Ryan. "We ended up staying a little longer than we intended." You'll see what Ryan means on the cover of the new self-titled issue, out on newsstands Nov. 12. The collection, culled from a weekend's worth of work, captures the feeling of sun-splashed living that Ryan and Corson-Friedrich discovered in Barlow. After working for top names like Craig Newman and Ed Carpenter at companies like Autoworks, Ryan and Corson-Friedrich decided they wanted to go their own way. "We were tired of looking at people's apartment buildings and advertising agencies and working for people in buildings and finding it was not that interesting," says Ryan. "We started looking at places that were pretty raw." Their first location was a house on a country road. "We needed some winter, and that's the way to get winter," says Ryan. "We really liked the idea of being up in the mountains for awhile. We made it into a really nice place and a really nice environment to be in." Ryan and Corson-Friedrich have been working on this project in fits and starts. "I did a lot of work on the field

Implement your own quick-keys for easy file searching. Use the INPUT key to insert the string to be searched for, and the ALT key to activate any of the filters. You can also use the F5 key to move to the next key. It is an important decision and a strategic position. If you are unable to come to an agreement on the 3{,}, it is essential that you come to an agreement on the other points. You will see that if you give a 7{,} you will be able to achieve the whole goal. 3.Listen to Your Customer is The Key to Success 3.1 Listen to the Customer's Product Ideas Your customer should be able to articulate their needs. They must be able to imagine and describe their ideal solution. 3{,} How can you help your customer achieve this solution? A highly effective method of assisting customers is to listen to them, rather than direct them. By doing so, you will help them reach the solution they desire. 3{,} Ensure that the Customer Reaches a Decision What is the probability that a customer will walk away if they don't feel like they have gained anything from the meeting? It is important to find a solution which the customer will use for at least 5{,} to 10{,} years. By being clear on this point, the customer will be much more likely to see the benefit of having used your product. 3{,} Offer your Customer with the Opportunity to Extend Their Relationship Consider how a customer is going to feel if you don't offer them an extended period of service. Should you offer a 6{,} to 9{,} year contract, or do you look at your customer as a one-shot deal? For that reason, make sure you are offering something which will keep your customer happy and excited. 3{,} Offer a Good Return on Investment How effective has your product been in terms of the value it has added? If you have worked hard to implement a solution which has caused a significant improvement in the customer's business, you will see a 6{,} to 10{,} % return on your investment. 3{,} Partnering with Other Businesses How can you utilise your customer's time and resources to their benefit? 3{,} The Customer's Business Background If your customer is coming to you 2edc1e01e8
