Heather Heyer has reportedly refused to renounce far-right groups and ideologies following his conviction. James Alex Fields Jr was convicted in November of first-degree murder, hate crimes and obstruction of justice by a jury in Charlottesville, Virginia. He had previously said he came to the city to attend a rally that was planned as a 'pro-white' event. The Daily

Progress reports that Fields had stated in a bond hearing he would refuse to renounce extremist ideologies, even though he was found guilty of acting in the context of a hate crime. According to the report, Fields' defense attorney, Lia Glunz, has not yet requested that her client renounce ideologies with which he has repeatedly identified. Heather Heyer was murdered in

Charlottesville in August 2017 (pictured: Heyer's Facebook page) Judge Richard Moore yesterday reportedly rejected a request by Fields' attorneys to request that Fields renounce any racist, white supremacist or violent ideologies. If the judge had allowed the request to be made, the outcome could have influenced the sentence the man could serve. Fields, 20, was remanded to the Albemarle-Charlottesville Regional Jail. He will be sentenced on 18 September. The verdict came after a month-long trial where jurors heard testimony from family members of Heather Heyer, who was murdered in Charlottesville in August 2017. In the courtroom, Fields listened to the verdict but did not speak. He also smiled and gave a slight nod as the judge entered the courtroom. A statement from the family said that after the verdict was read Fields immediately stood up and said: 'Thank you, your honor. 'I knew I'd be found guilty but I just didn't expect it to be guilty of murder.'" Fields, 20, was convicted of first-degree murder, hate crimes and obstruction of

Ever since the first generation of cell phones, several changes have been introduced, and there are many phone models are in operation these days. Apart from the changes in phone hardware, service providers have come up with many changes too. The terms 'refill', 'unlimited',

‘no-contract’, and ‘pay-as-you-go’ are familiar to most individuals nowadays. Let us discuss their meaning. Refill: Refill means the same as refill, and it means that a company is selling additional service or recharge pack to a customer. For example, OneWeb has introduced a very popular no-contract service called OneWeb. Subscribers are offered unlimited data at very low price, and 1 GB of data is a major step closer to 'unlimited'. More details at: one-web.com/plan Unlimited: When a company provides an unlimited service, it means that there is a limit on how much data the user can use in a given time. For example, T-Mobile has an unlimited phone service with a limit of 300 MB per month. While T-Mobile offers its clients the option to add unlimited data for a small price, such as $10 a month, most of the telecom companies offer unlimited phone plans. In some cases, it is even mandatory. As a matter of fact, in the United States, providers are required to offer unlimited services. No-Contract: No-contract means that the user doesn't have to make any payment for the services. It is applicable to mobile phones, and with the help of prepaid phones, there are fewer surprises for the user. In the case of phone, the user only has to pay for the phone instead of a huge money for a contract period. Pay-As-You-Go: With pay-as-you-go, the user has to pay for the services in small installments. For example, T-Mobile offers an easy pay option,
