For over 15 years, it has been known that the inorganic nutrient (phosphorous) is mainly stored in the kidney in bone and spleen. This high requirement of phosphorous in human is the reason for the development of phytate as a drug for the therapy of human diseases. However, the toxicity and side effects of phytate need to be improved. In this regard, it was the aim of this study to investigate the effects of phytate on the growth of human prostate cancer cell (PC3-M) in vitro and in vivo. The in vitro inhibitory effect of phytate on

I'm trying to convert a string into an integer in Python 2.7 and 3.2. I don't understand the limitations of int("2.7"). This appears to be working as expected, but I'm still looking for the correct way to convert strings into integers. A: Here is your answer: >>> str('2.7') '2.7' >>> int(str('2.7')) 2 To me the confusion lies in your
