They allow you to rent out a property for 6 months and you can buy a one-year lease at the price of 6 months rent. You can then decide when to extend the lease. At the moment there is no commitment, no deposit or any other ownership and eventually the property will be sold if you decide to stop. This means that you can buy (in the US) cheap homes with no money down and end up owning them for less than 6 months, with nothing to do. This is not a rental, just an on demand lease.As an academic, in the context of the upcoming housing shortage I have been thinking whether this kind of rental market is possible and whether we have any good resources to investigate this kind of market.Thanks! ----- acle: If I remember correctly, this was discussed a year or two ago, and the conclusion was that this wouldn't work in most cases because landlords would charge a higher rent for this property and would not even bother listing the property. ----- melenabo Thanks! just wanted to double check there are not conflicting news and something to be aware. 833 A.2d 1228 (2003) Norman H.
