Apple introduced a new security mechanism in macOS 10.13 that requires user approval before loading third-party kernel extensions (kexts). This change is intended to protect users from exploits. Now, most kernel extensions will be pre-approved by the user, and only a few may require user confirmation before running, for example, when upgrading the kernel or if the kernel configuration as a whole needs to be changed. In the past, some kexts received permission from the user at random. The approval mechanism is disabled by default, but can be enabled from the Update menu.
