System Operation A typical Philips C-Arm with system controls for acquiring and displaying the images The controls for controlling the system are located on the back of the system The controls are: The Philips Brightray offers an outstanding image quality, with brightness levels of up to 1000cd/m<sup>2</sup>. Brightness is adjustable to suit a variety of needs and enhances the operator's ability to detect relevant tissues. In addition, on-screen contrast, gamma and white are set to suit the clinical and examination requirements. The localizer system gives us a visual confirmation of the position of the X-ray beam. We can thus instantly identify whether we are correctly directing the image beam toward the region of interest or whether we have a slightly misplaced fluoroscopy beam. This facilitates the process of "fine tuning" the correct position of the X-ray beam. This localizer is included in the Brightray package.
