Dr. Anjali Dharamsi has done extensive research in fields including border studies, transnationalism, diaspora and migration studies. She has recently completed her book Aurangzeb's Spectre: Perspectives on His 'Migration' from Akbar to Aurangzeb, which deals with the thoughts, perceptions and experiences of a group of people in India and on Indian soil during the period when the Mughal empire was falling apart. Her book deals with the historiographic representation of the Mughal emperor Aurangzeb and his migration from India to Iran, in a study titled Hind and Mughal: Historiographic Modes, National Identities and Transnational Encounters. Her current research on transnationalism includes the 'transnational' history of religion, as well as the history of the Indian subcontinent, focusing on the political thought of thinkers like Lala Lajpat Rai, Bal Gangadhar Tilak, and Ambedkar. An Assistant Professor of Humanities, Dr. Praveen Dravidian teaches a wide range of courses including Liberal and Critical Thinking, History of Religions, Comparative Religion, and Gender and Social Justice. In addition to his teaching, he is engaged in a wide range of research in the area of Humanities. His interests include Genocide and Refugee Studies, History of Religions and Education. His interests are especially in relation to the history of religions and their relationships with each other. He is also interested in Dalit Studies, particularly in comparison to Indian Hindu dominant outlook and finally on the history of the Roman Catholic Church. He hopes to contribute to the understanding of the relationship between religion and science and the politics of history and hope to broaden the field of his research which involves popular culture and history. He believes that education and its role in the learning of the humanities is important. He has taught and researched in the United States and Asia. Dr. Dravidian has received the Career Development Award in the last two years for his research on genocide in the Middle East.
