This leads to high mortality and multiple comorbidities. There is no effective therapy to cure or even improve the survival rate of patients with end-stage renal disease (ESRD). Such a large population of ESRD patients with few treatment options create a huge market for the development of new therapies. According to a new report published by Transparency Market Research, the global nephro-support market is expected to reach a value of $5.9bn by 2023, doubling at a CAGR of 16.5% between 2017 and 2023. Around the world, a number of physicians have been experimenting with the use of stem cells for the treatment of ESRD and other diseases. In a related study published in the Journal of Cell Science, researchers from The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill found that mesenchymal stem cells (MSCs) isolated from the umbilical cord blood of newborns were able to regenerate damaged kidneys. According to the report, the global nephro-support market can be classified into four key segments: Urine-processing products Dialysis treatment products Kidney organ-support products Nephro-support products Nephro-support products, which include the nephro-support devices
